William Woodruff, like most skilled workers in the early 1800s, learned the trade of printing through an apprenticeship. This contract for indentured service was made between Woodruff, his mother, Hannah, and master printer Alden Spooner. Woodruff would work with Spooner until his apprenticeship ended when he turned 21.

ARKANSAS GAZETTE

LITTLE ROCK, JANUARY 6, 1824.

REMOVAL.—The Office of the ARKANSAS GA-ZETTE will be removed to-morrow, to the new twostory brick house, a few rods west of the tan-yard.

COMMENCEMENT OF VOLUME V.

The present number commences the fifth volume of the ARKANSAS GAZETTE—and the volumes will hereafter commence and end with the current year.

Subscribers who wish to PAY IN ADVANCE, can have an opportunity of doing so, by calling on our Agents in the several counties, to whom our bills have been transmitted. Those who do not avail themselves of the privilege of paying the sum of $3 in advance, will be expected to pay $4 at the end of six months, agreeable to the terms of the Gazette.

We again request all persons indebted to the Gazette office, for subscriptions, advertising, printing, &c. to discharge their accounts without delay, as longer indulgence cannot be given. Territorial Scrip will be received, at a discount of twenty-five per cent. in payment of debts due this office.

On January 6, 1824, William Woodruff announced in his paper, the Arkansas Gazette, that his print shop and offices were relocating. The reconstructed print shop at the Historic Arkansas Museum is built on the exact location announced in this newspaper notice.
