DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The small brick-stucco building at 320 Clay Street (directly across Clay Street from the present Clark County Courthouse) is known as Govenor Harris Flanagin's law office. It has been used as a law office by many highly respected Arkadelphia lawyers and is now (1976) owned and occupied by Judge B. W. Sanders, young Arkadelphia attorney and city judge.

Originally the office consisted of two brick rooms with a porch extending across the rooms with an entrance from the West end of the porch. No distinctive architecture is featured. It was built as a law office and has no special features. There was no door between the two rooms, only outside doors which opened to the porch. Each room has a chimney and fire place. The brick walls are eight inches thick. Plastered strips of lathing covered the interior walls and ceiling.

After Governor Flanagin's death in 1874, the Flanagin family added some wooden rooms to the law office in order to rent it as a private residence. A door was cut between the two brick rooms and the building became rent property until 1903 when Judge J. H. Crawford bought it and restored it to its original use.

Judge Sanders acquired the property in 1974, and has restored the old building to its former dignified appearance with few changes. It continues to be a law office and the meeting place of politically-minded citizens. It is now known as Judge Sanders' law office, a fitting successor to Governor Flanagin's law office.

Judge Sanders is president of the Clark County Historical Association.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

The office was built before the Civil War by Major J.L. Witherspoon, an attorney. J.H.O'Baugh, a local brick maker and builder, lists in his account book a note for $70.00 which he owed to Major Witherspoon and a later entry (1855) shows his sale of 13,990 bricks to Major Witherspoon for $111.92. Legends claim that Mr. O'Baugh built the office in payment for a debt which he owed to Major Witherspoon.

The two front rooms or brick portion of the office is thought to have been built between 1855 and 1860, likely 1858.

In 1877, Governor Garland appointed Major Witherspoon to fill an unexpired term as the Arkansas Attorney General. After his service in this office, Major Witherspoon was appointed Associate Justice of the Arkansas Supreme Court . Both Major Witherspoon and Governor Flanagin (who became Major Witherspoon's partner before the Civil War) were Whigs. When the party declined, both men became loyal Democrats. Both were doubtful of secession but went with the Confederacy when President Lincoln called for soldiers to fight the South. Both served in the Confederate Army. In 1862, Colonel Dandridge McRae made Witherspoon recruiting officer and later placed him in charge of recruiting in District 2 at Paraclifta, Arkansas. He was promoted to major of the 10th battalion of the Arkansas Infantry.

Governor Flanagin was born in Cumberland County, New Jersey, attended a Quaker School, taught and studied law in Pennsylvania and Illinois, and moved to Greenville, Arkansas, in 1839 to practice law. He moved to Arkadelphia when the town became the county seat of Clark County in 1842.

Clark County elected Flanagin a representative to the state legislature in 1842, and a state senator in 1848. In 1851, he married Martha Nash of Washington, Arkansas. A few years later he became Major Witherspoon's law partner. He represented Clark County to the constitutional convention of 1861. The same year (1861) he joined the Second Arkansas Mountain Rifles and was commissioned a captain. When Commander McIntosh was killed at Elk Horn, Flanagin was made colonel. He fought in the Kentucky campaign under Kirby Smith. m No. 10-300a v. 10-74}

Harris Flanagin was in camp at Knoxville, Tennessee, when he was informed of his nomination and election as Confederate Governor of Arkansas. He was inaugurated on November 15, 1862. When the Union forces threatened Little Rock, he moved the state government (and his family) to Washington in Hempstead County. When the war was over, he lost the right to vote and to hold office and did not regain the privilege until 1872. In 1874, he represented Clark County at the constitutional convention and he was made chairman of the Judiciary Committee. He became ill at the convention, returned home and died at Arkadelphia on October 23, 1874.

After the Civil War, both men practiced law and used the small building as their office. During reconstruction, the regions around Clark County Courthouse was known as the Rad Hole. The work "carpetbagger" was not used in Arkadelphia. The northern invaders were known as Radicals or Rads. One can imagine Witherspoon and Flanagin in the midst of the Rads' nest. Through it all they remained good citizens and protected the interest of the Arkadelphia citizens.

Governor Flanagin bought the small office from Major Witherspoon. When the former governor died in 1874, his son, Duncan Flanagin, inher inherited the office. He added the frame addition at the back and rented the property as a residence. In 1903, he sold the building to Judge John H. Crawford who practiced law there until his death in 1930. The building passed to Judge Crawford's son, Dwight H. Crawford; a prominent lawyer of Arkadelphia.

When Mr. Crawford died in 1968, the office went to his widow, in Mrs. Kathleen Crawford, and later to their daughter, Mrs. Maragaret Crawford Kauffman. Mrs. Kauffman rented the office to Judge Earnest Still, Arkadelphia city judge. After Judge Still died, the office remained vacant for a short time. It was sold to Judge Bob Sanders in 1974 and he has restored the old building.

The Woodmen of the World have placed a plaque on the building denoting . its noble history. Arkadelphia citizens are very proud of the small office and point to it with pride.
