Administration Office c. 1935

The Administration Office was originally used only as an office, but is now an office and a gift shop. Like the cabins, it was built in the Rustic Resort style. It is a one-story building with a continuous cast-concrete foundation. The floor plan is irregular and there are two rearprojecting sheds and a bay projection on the southern (front) facade. The building is of fieldstone masonry construction with a gable roof that is covered in composition shingle. There are two porches and one patio. The first porch covers approximately a quarter of the southern (front) facade and has a gable roof supported by columns of field stone. The second porch is located on the western facade of the building and has a shed roof also supported by columns of field stone. All the stone columns are large on the bottom and gradually taper in diameter towards the top. The stone patio is located on the western side of the building. There are two interior field-stone chimneys; one is located at the back of the front bay projection, and the other is located near the center of the building. Some of the windows are the sliding type with a single pane of glass; the others are stationary with fifteen panes of glass. None of the windows are original and some have been filled in with board and batten. Although the wooden fence is not original, the fence posts themselves are original and are approximately five feet tall and three feet wide.

The land that would comprise Petit Jean State Park was donated to the State of Arkansas in the mid-1920's by individual landowners and sympathetic lumbering concerns as the first step in the formation of a state parks system. The top of Petit Jean Mountain had already been recognized for its scenic splendor, and for its geological wealth and diversity, and so seemed a particularly worthy site. The initial plan of these citizens was to turn the entire site over to the federal government for the establishment of a national park; however, after considerable study, National Park Service officials determined that Petit Jean Mountain was not a unique natural resource when evaluated on a national basis, and thus declined to assume ownership. Yet these same officials strongly encouraged the state to preserve and maintain the site as an important representation of Arkansas's natural heritage, and in 1923, the Arkansas Legislature passed Act 276 authorizing the Commissioner of State Lands to accept land donations for state parks and reservations. Thus began the Arkansas State Parks system, with Petit Jean State Park as its flagship.

The Administration Office was constructed c. 1935 at Petit Jean State Park by the men of the 1781st Company of the Civilian Conservation Corps, Arkansas District, stationed at Morrilton, Arkansas as an administrative building to be used by the park's staff for the management and administration of the park. This facility was constructed by the CCC as part of the overall plan to develop this part of the mountain as a public park to be administered by the state of Arkansas.

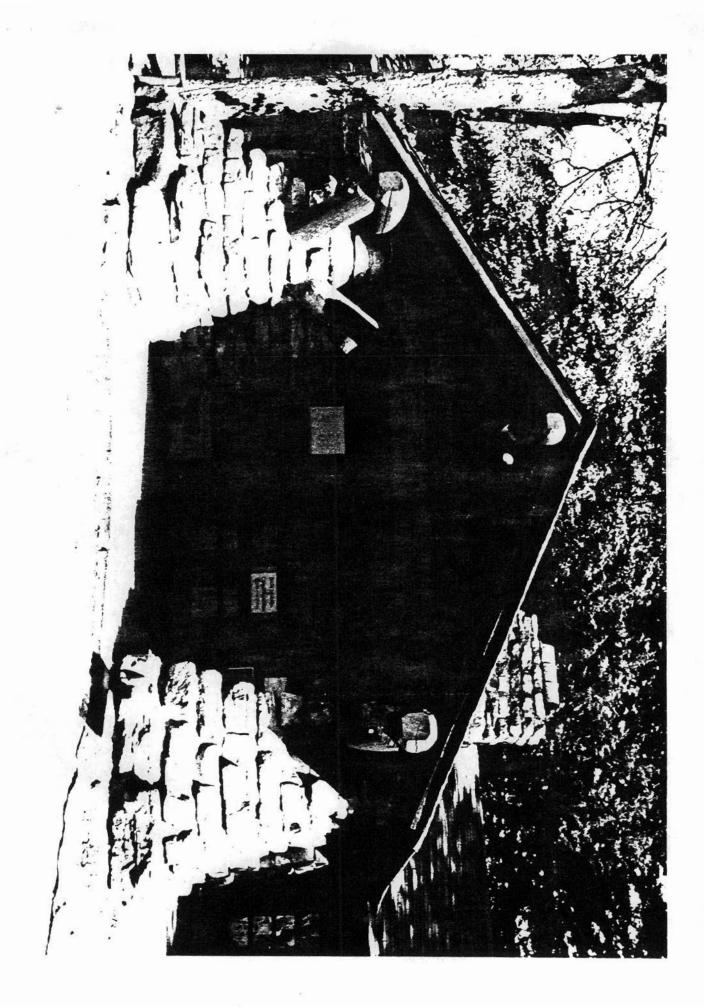

This building was erected at Petit Jean State Park by the men of the Civilian Conservation Corps for the purpose of providing office space for park staff, and was intended to be used for the management and maintenance of the park. Thus the Administration Office is eligible under Criterion A for its associations with both the Civilian Conservation Corps' importance within Arkansas social history and its role in the development of outdoor parks dedicated to public leisure and recreational activities. It is also eligible under Criterion C due to its status as a representative and intact example of the Rustic style of architecture that was made popular nationwide by the CCC, and which has since become virtually identified with it.
