DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (If known) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

Built circa 1830 by General Grandison D. Royston, this fine old home reflects characteristics of the Greek Revival style.

The original plan, 55'-4" wide and 50'-10" deep consisted of four rooms, two on each side of a spacious central hall. Between each pair of siderooms is a back to back double fireplace. A shed roof porchlike structure was later added on the back (south) facade, housing a kitchen.

A prominent construction feature, 10" x 10" solid, hand hewn sills rest on brick and stone piers and support the sawn stud walls and floor joists. Underpinning between perimeter piers on the north facade is wood diamond lattice work. The exterior is finished with horizontal beveled siding and corner boards, the architrave and frieze are flat boards with cornices boxed.

The roof is medium hipped, currently covered with composition shingles. In 1934, an Historic American Buildings Survey indicated roofing material as corrugated iron with formed metal ridges. The gabled roof of the entrance porch ends in a Greek Revival pediment supported by four square, tapered columns with moulded capitals and square plinth.

Double hung window sashes contain 6 x 6 lights, flat board side surrounds carrying an entablatured head piece. The windows are shuttered with louvered blinds.

There are two main chimneys single stacked units one offset left, one offset right, inside ended, running bond brick construction with corbeled caps.

The single entrance door with six raised panels is set within an architrave with flush side lights and flush transom.

To quote the Kendrew Report, Some Historic Buildings in Arkansas, Royston House:

"The Royston House is one of the finest remaining houses in this community. It is of the Greek Revival period and dates back to the 1830's. It has not been greatly altered and most of the original details are in place. It has fine proportions, large and commodious rooms with high ceilings and the central hall is a real feature of the house, giving it elegance and scale. The ownership of the house is in sympathetic hands."

There were opportunities for a young lawyer in the frontier community. In 1833 he was appointed Prosecuting Attorney for the Third Judicial District of the Territory of Arkansas, and held the position till the fall of 1835 when he was chosen as a delegate to the Constitutional Convention that framed the Constitution under which Arkansas was admitted to the Union. 8. SIGNIFICANCE, Continued he was elected Hempstead County Representative to the first Arkansas Legislature. On December 6, 1837, he was elected speaker of the House. It is interesting to note that he was elected to fill the position left vacant by the death of speaker John Wilson. Wilson had been stabbed to death by Representative John J. Anthony over a real, or fancied, affront during the course of a debate on Wolf Scalp bounties. Royston tried to stop the struggle, which was fought with Bowie knives, by shoving a chair between the two antagonists, but was unsuccessful in his efforts.

Grandison D. Royston spent most of his life in public service. Under the administration of President Tyler he was appointed United States District Attorney for Arkansas. He held this position until 1842. Royston saw no war-time service. His title of Brigadier General was acquired when he served as Militia Chief under Governor Thomas S. Drew (1844-1849). In 1858 he was sent to the Arkansas Senate to represent the counties of Hempstead, LaFayette and Pike. In this session he became the father of the Levee System and the State's Flood Control Plans.

The Civil War brought to Royston the same problems which faced other prominent southerners. He was actually a Unionist and was opposed to its dissolution. When secession was an accomplished fact, however, and the Confederate States formed, he supported the move to the best of his ability. He was elected to the Confederate Congress and served at Richmond for two years.

After the war his financial and political position was considerably altered. He resumed the practice of law in Washington, but held no political office or appointment until 1874 when he was again chosen as a delegate to the Constitutional Convention of that year. He served as President of that body.

Royston died at Washington, Arkansas, on August 14, 1889. He was in his eightieth year.
