Four miles west of Camden, in a grove of magnificent oak trees, stands the old homestead of the Bragg family. It is a two-story frame house with five bays across the front on both first and second floor. A two-tiered porch covers the main entrance and is supported by four square columns with Doric capitals. There is a railing on the second floor tier, but none on the first. The house is basically rectangular with a hip roof.

The main entrance has a double-entry door with rectangular sidelights and transom. The doors have three tiers of molded panels. The door, sidelights and transom are trimmed with architrave and cornice. The door on the second story is a single entry with no sidelights or transom. It is trimmed in a very plain fashion.

The windows are most unusual. The first floor windows are double-hung sashes. The top sash has nine lights and the bottom six lights. The second floor windows are not so unusual, having six lights per sash in double-hung windows. The windows have no shutters, nor is there any indication that they ever did. There are two interior chimneys extending through the roof. Their caps are corbelled.

The house was built in the late 1840's but not occupied by the Bragg family until 1850. The house has the symmetrical facade typical of the period and the Classical collonade supporting the porch roof. The building has maintained most of its original integrity, and has suffered minimal alteration. Most of the alterations have been to achieve a state of utility corresponding to the changing times. Composition shingles have replaced the original wood shingles, and new siding has been added. A door has replaced a window and there is an enclosed back porch that is probably not original. INSTRUC

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

Peter Newport Bragg moved to Camden in 1842. He came from Lowndes County, Alabama. He was followed in his immigration by his brothers, Ira, Sam, Hosea and Eber. All of the Braggs settled in the area and their descendants are still living in Ouachita County.

Peter Bragg brought the claim to a small farm (near where the Bragg House now stands) from Mr. Levi Stone, who came from Missouri about 1822. Bragg also bought a saw mill in order to saw lumber for the house he intended to build. The saw mill, however, was the only one in the area; and the demand for lumber was so great that Bragg was unable to saw lumber for his own use until a period of some years had elapsed. Bragg could have sawn lumber for his house at an earlier date, but it was considerably more profitable to supply lumber to others when the demand was so great.

In 1850, the house was completed to the point of occupancy, but it required an additional two years to finish the interior and exterior work. The house was constructed of virgin pine which was, of course, sawn in Bragg's mill, by his slaves. The mill was significant in Bragg's life. He met his death there not many years after the completion of his house. The house, characteristic of the period, is fastened by a combination of mortise and tenon, wooden pegs, and square cut nails. The wide boards, in floors and wall paneling, recall the early lumbering days in Arkansas when large stands of virgin timber were available for cutting.

During the Civil War a brief skirmish between Union and Confederate Troops was fought close to the house. Mrs. Bragg stood with her children in a small alcove between the dining room and family room, so that the double chimney would be between them and the fighting. Several bullets pierced the walls, but Braggs, like the homeowners of today, repaired or replaced the damaged wood as soon as possible, failing thereby, to anticipate the interest of vistors a century later. ## 8. Significance Continued:

There is a small family cemetery approximately oneeighth mile east of the house. Peter Newport Bragg, his mother and several other members of the family are buried in the beautiful little plot.

Although the Bragg house has been occupied by various families throughout the years, the house has always remained in the possession of the Bragg family. It is now owned by Thomas Gaughan, a great grandson of Peter Newport Bragg.
