DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The Ready-Mayer House in Helena is one of a number of residences designed by architect Charles L. Thompson of Little Rock. During the early twentieth century Thompson's designs were especially popular among wealthy Arkansas families. The Ready-Mayer House, built in 1910, is similar to other Thompson houses in its building materials and simple but elegant style; however, this particular house is built on a somewhat smaller scale than other Thompson houses:

The Ready-Mayer House is a two-and-one-half-storey brick residence painted white and trimmed with black shutters. The symmetrical facade is divided into three bays. Above the outside bays shingled dormers project from the gable roof. Twin chimneys rise above the ridge line near the north and south ends of the roof.

A one-storey portico with balcony covers the front entry. Paired Doric columns support the balcony which has a low railing with cast stone urn-shaped balusters. Both the ground floor and balcony entries are flanked by sidelights and set in an elliptical arch. The main entry has a fan-light transom above the paneled door. A railing similar to that on the balcony surrounds the open concrete porch which covers the entire area immediately in front of the house.

Projecting from the south elevation is a one-storey flat-roofed wing. Though originally open this sum porch is now enlosed. The only other exterior alterations to the structure include the enclosure of two lattice porches on the rear (west) elevation. These porch enclosures have left the basic floor plan unaltered.

The rear elevation of the Ready-Mayer House has two wings projecting from the basic rectangular structure. The south rear elevation has a two-storey wing with the upper porch enclosed. Projecting from the center of the rear elevation is the one storey gable-roofed kitchen wing with a tall brick chimney on the west end. A one-storey flat-roofed porch, now enclosed, lies north of the kitchen.

The interior of the house was completely redecorated in 1974. Floors not carpeted were refinished and are in beautiful condition. The original marble floor in the south sun porch also remains in excellent condition. Several original brass light fixtures are still in place in the dining room and formal living room.

The entry hall is open to the second storey and features a three-run stairway. Slender turned balusters support handrails set between square posts at each landing.

The original blueprints, now on file with the Arkansas Historic Preservation Program, show that the Ready-Mayer House has changed very little since its construction in 1910. The house remains in excellent condition and rests on its original tree-shaded lot in a quiet residential section of Helena.

TATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

The Ready-Mayer House is the only Helena residence known to have been designed by architect Charles L. Thompson of Little Rock. As one of Arkansas' leading urchitects in the early twentieth century, Thompson designed many buildings for both public and private patrons. The Washington County Courthouse in ayetteville and the Garrett House in El Dorado are two structures designed by Thompson which are listed on the National Register of Historic Places.

Though on a smaller scale than most residential structures designed by Thompson, the Ready- Mayer House does display other characteristics of his work. Thompson used brick and cast stone in his early twentieth-century designs. Sim balanced floor plans made use of wide hallways and large rooms.

rical facades with dormers and some classical features marked many of mpson's residential designs.

The Ready-Mayer House is a two-and-one-half-storey brick structure. It has a symmetrical facade with elliptical arch entries on the first and second storeys flanked by twin dormers projecting from the sloping gable roof. Doric columns are used on the one-storey portico and on the sun porch and carport extending from the south elevation. Urn-shaped balusters of cast stone encircle the vide front porch area and the small balcony on the facade.

In 1910 the Ready-Mayer House was constructed for Mr. and Mrs. E. S. Ready of Helena. Mr. Ready was a prominent Helena businessman, and Mrs. Ready was involved in many local activities. She was especially active in the organization and construction of the Helena Library and Museum.

Following Mrs. Ready's death in 1954, the house was sold to a number of successive owners. The present owners, Mr. and Mrs. James I. Mayer, purchased and restored the house in 1974.

The Ready-Mayer House exemplifies a wealthy businessman's house in early twentieth-century Arkansas. Architecturally, it is significant as an example of the work of an important Arkansas architect, Charles L. Thompson.
