Physical Description

Raised high above the street level on a terraced corner lot this large two-story house designed by Charles Thompson has few decorative details to detract from its broad and simple massing. The three bay house, faced with narrow gray-brown brick, presents a strictly symmetrical facade to the street with a dominant horizontal emphasis. The full-length hipped roof front porch is supported by plain brick piers which frame the low brick walls of the porch, affording a sense of privacy and shade. Two low gableroofed dormers with narrow, horizontally aligned windows and overhanging eaves with exposed purlins are a prominent feature. Similar dormers appear on each elevation. The broad, horizontal emphasis and the overhanging roof recall the Prairie Style, but a Classical Revival note is interjected in the once open two-story porch which projects on the south. Here two monumental Tuscan columns support the porch, now enclosed and faced with stucco. Aside from the multi-paned sidelights of the door, all windows are of wide proportions with six-over-one lights.

Statement of Significance

Charles Thompson designed the Shelby England House circa 1917. The style of the house is difficult to assess although it has features identified with the Colonial Revival and Prairie Styles. The house sits unobtrusively on the streetscape thus giving it a sense of privacy nicely reinforced by the low brick walls that surround the porch. The England House is a fine example of Thompson's work with the less affluent clients.
