DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The Faucette-Farmer-Gray House is a two-and-one-half storey masonry structure, square in plan with a projecting bay on the front (south) facade. Centered on the north is a two storey bay which serves the kitchen on the first level and on the second level is an enclosed sleeping space.

The front entrance porch is a single storey shed. Fluted box columns are arranged in a cluster of three at both ends of the porch front and are paired in the middle. The cornice is beaded. Glass in the entry door, transom and sidelights is beveled, as is the glass in the front windows.

The roof of the house is hipped with gabled projections. The wood cornice is wide and the eaves are deep. On the south is a single gabled dormer with stick work on its double windows. These windows end in the dormer's cornice, producing a triangular top. The other windows on the south have a similar stick pattern. The window on the north projection has a mantle-like lintel with a round window above.

There are two outside corbelled chimneys. The chimneys and house are finished in a Dutch bond with headers darker than stretchers. This value change in color is produced through texture, with the headers make of roughly cut half bricks.

The entry hall, with a single turn stair, leads to the kitchen on the south and to the parlor on the west. The original pocket doors leading off the hall were replaced c. 1925 with doors, transoms and sidelights of beveled glass.

The most interesting interior feature is the parlor fireplace which has a blue ceramic-tile hearth and infill around the gas unit mounted in the fire-box. The mantle is supported by Corinthian capitaled columns. Carving on the capitals is of fine workmanship.

Pocket doors separate the parlor from the dining room which is decorated with a plate mould. The house has its original lighting fixtures.

The house rests on its original site in a residential neighborhood near downtown North Little Rock. The immediate neighborhood retains much of its turn-of-the-century character. The house has been continually occupied since construction and remains in good condition.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

The Faucette-Farmer-Gray House, constructed c. 1912, is one of North Little Rock's older residences which is significant for both its architectrual features and historical associations. The structure is an important part of one of the city's oldest surviving residential neighborhoods.

A most unusual feature of the house is its brick veneer. Laid in a Dutch bond pattern, the header bricks are darker in color than the stretcher bricks, and the surface of the headers is rough cut, resembling hewn wood. The alternating color and texture of the bricks gives the house a most interesting wall surface.

Other interesting features include the corbelled chimneys, cast stone lugsills and a one-storey entry porch with boxed, fluted half-columns. The second-storey indow above the main entry has an unusually heavy entablature with a round window above. Interior features of note include the original light fixtures, carved parlor mantle and plumbing system.

The Faucette-Farmer-Gray House was constructed by Mayor James P. Faucette, an important business and civic leader of North Little Rock. Faucette built two almost indetical houses on the double lots at the corner of Fourth and Willow Streets. The corner house, destroyed in the 1970's, was built for the Faucette family and thus was somewhat more elaborate. The remaining house was built by Faucette as rental property.

The Faucette family was instrumental in establishing a sound, workable government for the city of North Little Rock. J. P. Faucette's brother, William C. Faucette. was the city's first mayor following its separation from the city of Little Rock in 1904. In 1911 James P. Faucette was elected to the first of his three terms as mayor, serving through 1917.

Mayor James P. Faucette's second re-election was described in a contemporary newspaper editorial as "the strongest endorsement they (the citizens) could have given to progressive ideas and policies as he sees them."* Some of Faucette's progressive policies included completion of a large sewer and drainage system, an extensive street-paving program and construction of a city hall. (The North Little Rock City Hall was added to the National Register of Historic Places on August 6, 1975.)

The house was completed about 1912 and was rented for several years. In 1918 r. John Farmer, a railroad engineer for Missouri-Pacific Lines, purchased the house from Mayor Faucette. Like his neighbor, Mr. Farmer was also interested in local politics, serving as an alderman and making two unsuccessful bids for mayor. Farmer's daughter, Mrs. Hazel Farmer Gray, now owns and resides in the house. Thus, a single family has occupied the house for the past half-century.

The loss of the Faucette residence at Fourth and Willow makes preservation of the Faucette-Farmer-Gray House even more important. The house is one of the most important structures in a neighborhood which retains much of its historic character.

During the past decade many of the older houses in the neighborhood have been destroyed, and even now this important structure is threatened with demolition by a government agency. Nevertheless, the preservation of this and neighboring structures must occur to enable North Little Rock to retain one of its most important historic neighborhoods.

Individually, the house is significant for its architectural features and historic associations. As part of an historic neighborhood, preservation of the Faucette-Farmer-Gray House becomes especially important to the city of North Little Rock.
