DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (I known) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The Black House stands as one of the earlier examples of Victorian architecture remaining in Arkansas. Originally built as a one-storey, two-room structure with common fire-place, it underwent extensive modifications about 1872 that resulted in the present day form. New rooms were added to the first floor and a complete second floor was built. The present plan is essentially a central hall with stairway, two rooms on one side and a single room on the other. The central hall extends to the rear of the house, connecting to the semi-detached kitchen facilities.

The essence of the Black House's architectural merit rests with the ornamental woodwork detailing. All window trim is identical, with common features of triangle pediment with centered clover-leaf medallion, paired scroll brackets of delicate scale, dentils, and chamfered edge pilasters straddling the window opening. The window openings extend to floor level on both storeys.

A two-storey veranda dominates the entry facade and is the most significant feature of the Black House. The same details of the windows are mirrored in every manner and the entablature of the house is continuous about the veranda. Paired chamfered posts in a three-bay setting carry the second storey porch floor, while single matching posts in a seven bay setting carry the porch roof. Ornamental latticework between the posts creates an arcade effect. The cloverleaf pattern appears in the latticework as it does in the windows.

The ornateness of the exterior prevails on the interior details in the form of elaborate moulded trim and a large baseboard. Fireplaces are framed by fluted pilasters, a plain frieze, and simple mantel shelf. Door hinges are representative of the most ornate of the Victorian period.

The Black House is located in a well landscaped corner of a four lot property estate with a carriage and stable shelter located to the rear of the house. It has been continually occupied since 1875, and remains in an excellent state of repairs.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

Just before the Civil War began a small two-room structure was built on a corner lot in the heart of Searcy, Arkansas. In 1866 four adjoining lots, including the one on which the small structure stood, were purchased by Captain Benjamin Clayton Black, CSA. In March, 1866, Captain Black and his wife, the former Molly Rosamond Jones, were married. According to a grandson, it was their honeymoon trip to New Orleans which influenced the Blacks on the architectural style of their future home.

For several years the Blacks lived in the pre-war two-room structure, but in 1872 they began the enlargement that has made their family residence a Searcy landmark. By 1874 the two-storey white clapboard house was finished; however, eight years later some of the six original porches were rebuilt, and some of the interior walls were replastered.

Captain Black gained local fame for his service to the Confederacy during the Civil War. He enlisted at age 18, but after a long illness in Kentucky he was discharged. After returning to Searcy to rest and recuperate, he re-enlisted by joining a Confederate cavalry company. After Federal troops captured the State Capitol, young Black was commissioned to raise a company, of which he was elected captain. His company was attached to the 48th Arkansas cavalry regiment, and was actively engaged for the remainder of the war. In March, 1865, Captain Black and his troops surrendered at Searcy.

Following the war, Captain Black entered into business at Searcy and became active in local politics. He served as chairman of the Democratic Central Committee for both the county and congressional districts, and was elected for several terms to the office of Mayor of Searcy and Sheriff of White County. After serving as Searcy postmaster in the late 1880's, Captain Black returned to the mercantile business. During the last decade of the 19th century he served a six-year term on the University of Arkansas Board of Trustees.

Captain Black's civic-mindedness was further evidenced by his efforts to have the county's first railroad routed through Searcy; however, he was unsuccessful in diminishing the fears of his fellow townsmen that the railroad would bring an undesirable rough element to the community. When the railroad passed through White County east of Searcy, a determined Captain Black built a wooden track with two horse drawn cars running from Searcy to the main track at Kensett.

Eleven children were born to Benjamin and Molly Black, and the only remaining child now lives in the family home. After her mother's death in the mid-1940's, Miss Lorena Black returned to live in the house where she was born. The house has been preserved because of its sentimental value and architectural significance to both the Black family and the entire Searcy community.

As one of the earliest Victorian residences in Arkansas, the Black House became a landmark in the Searcy community. The two-storey veranda with its detailed ornamental woodwork is the most striking feature of this two-storey white frame house. The elaborately detailed exterior is continued to a lesser extent in the interior. Located just a few blocks from the town square, the Black House stands as an ever present reminder of Searcy's past.
