Description

During the Railroad Era (1870-1914) in White County a variety of vernacular houses were constructed. They were also built out of a variety of materials. Surviving examples from this period, however, are somewhat limited. The Colonel Ralph Andrews House is a fine example of a two-story cross-shaped building that is of frame construction and clad with weatherboard. The gable roof is covered with composition shingles and the entire structure rests on brick piers.

Located at 517 W. Center Street, this building was constructed less than four blocks southwest of Beebe's commercial district. The Colonel Ralph Andrews House was constructed c. 1885 and is still in excellent condition.

Its main, or north elevation is dominated by a centrally placed hipped roof porch that is flanked by a one-story shed roof porch that extends across the facade of the building. The porch roof of the first floor is supported by wooden turned posts that are adorned with jig-sawn wooden brackets. Other decorative features include Folk Victorian spindle work and a turned post balustrade. Similar decorative features and porch supports are found on the second story of the porch as well.

The only alteration to the main elevation of the structure is that the southwest portion of the first floor porch has been enclosed. The west side of the enclosed porch is fenestrated with a small centrally placed six-over-six double-hung sash window. There was a one-story porch that extended the full length of the building's south elevation but this has been totally enclosed except for a portion of the west side that has been screened. This porch is accessed by single doors on the south and west elevations. The north elevation of the enclosed rear porch is relieved by a single narrow one-over-one double-hung wood sash window while the east elevation is fenestrated with a single asymmetrically placed two-over-two double-hung wood sash window. A single small asymmetrically placed eight-over-eight double-hung sash window is found on the south side of the rear enclosed porch just east of the door.

Fenestration on the original building consists of either single or paired two-over-two double-hung wood sash windows. A paired two-over-two double-hung sash window was originally located on the first floor of the east elevation but this has since been removed. The only evidence of its existence is found in historic photographs of the structure. A corbelled brick chimney rises from the gable peak of the southern two-story gable wing.

Significance

This house is being nominated under Criterion C with local significance because of its architectural integrity. When this house was constructed c. 1885, by C.E. Price, it was one of many cross-shaped buildings built during the Railroad Era (1870-1914). Though there are eighteen of these buildings extant in the county, few exhibit the amount of integrity found in the Colonel Ralph Andrews House. The Andrews House can significantly contribute to the study of Nineteenth Century vernacular architecture in White County.
